

A B S T R A C T

A secure, optically readable data medium comprises a data-carrying zone readable by a read light beam, and at least a portion that is photosensitive, being provided with a photosensitive material and exposed to the read light beam. The photosensitive material contains an active compound taken from the family of diarylethenes.